

ABSTRACT

A reheat stretch blow-molding process comprises providing a polypropylene preform, and heating the preform utilizing a plurality of infrared energy sources positioned adjacent said preform at distances inversely proportional to the wall thickness of said preform directly apposing said infrared energy sources.

10

15

20

25